

Dear all,

Are you endanger of exploding if someone asks “What’s on Netflix tonight?”
Are you getting so bored you are watching Youtube videos of other people going on holiday or even considering gardening?

Then just for a refreshing change for one evening why not join in to do something different and learn something new while raising money for charity?

“Once Upon a Time” is an evening presentation with more jokes than a Shakespearean comedy -i.e. more than one.

Many of us have to give presentations at some point in our professional lives and most of us don’t enjoy it to say the least. For some of us it is frankly our worst nightmare. However, in reality this is not really surprising as the majority of us have no real training in delivering presentations and have a less than enjoyable experience. The audience can be disappointed and an opportunity wasted.

This presentation is a light hearted, fun (it says here) and hopefully useful approach to creating and presenting avoiding many of the common pitfalls and mistakes most of which I have made at some point! Plus its cheaper than trying to get to London to do a course for £250... not that you could even if you wanted to...
